GOVERNOR ADDRESSES GRADUATES

At Normal School Commencement Friday Morning—President Frederick E. Sykes Spoke to Women and the New Education.

Fifty-two young women and one young man, equipped for teaching by four years course of study and training at the Willimantic State Normal school, were graduated from that institution with honors Friday afternoon. Loomer Opera house was filled with a large and representative audience, showing the popular interest in the Normal school in this city. The stage was elaborately decorated. Seated on the platform with Principal H. T. Burr were Governor Simon E. Baldwin and Dr. Frederick E. Sykes, president of the Connecticut College for Women at New London. The musical preface was admirably rendered by Helms's orchestra. Especially fine was the rendering of Anton Wagner's Romance Op. 2. Mr. Helms's solo work with flute obligato being of artistic excellence. The formal program of the afternoon followed:

Chorus, The Earth Is Decked with Beauty, Maase; address, Woman and the New Education, Dr. Frederick E. Sykes; orchestra, Romance Op. 2, Anton Wagner; chorus, Radiant Morn of Spring, Forrester; presentation of diplomas, His Excellency Simon E. Baldwin; orchestra, Concert march from Scenes Pittoresques, J. Massenet. Before the exercises the orchestra played the following: (a) Prelude and

DANIELSON

President Sykes' Address

Woman and the New Education was the theme of the able and scholarly address by President Sykes of the Connecticut College at New London, the only woman's college in the state. He reviewed the essential elements that had developed the higher education of women, giving them the equipment to fill large places of responsibility in education, professional life, industrial affairs and in solving social problems. The chief center of woman's life activities, said President Sykes, was shifting, and now the educational realm is showing a small body of men entirely surrounded by women. The best approach to instruction is now through the concrete, developing the faculty of doing things, declared the speaker, who favored rural schools for rural life and city schools for city life. All this educational evolution leads to vocational training and is so cheap as education or pays as well. President Sykes incidentally prophesied a radical reform in spelling.

Governor Baldwin's Address

Governor Baldwin in a brief address told the graduates they were to teach the coming generations in this state how to talk, write and reason and amplified each point with telling and practical suggestions.

There is more Calamity in this section of the country than all other districts put together, and until the last few years, the people here have been suffering from a great many diseases. For a great many years doctors have given them the best of medical science and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure the local trouble, have made the disease more and more constitutional. Science has proven Calamity to be a constitutional disease, and the only cure is constitutional treatment. Hall's Calamity Cure, manufactured by F.
